

UNIONS REFUSE TO FINISH 17 BUILDINGSTrades Council Says Work of Non-Union Men Must Be Torn Down.

The Building Trades Council, composed of representatives of forty-one "key" unions in the building industry, has decided that all steel framework on new buildings which have been put up by non-union steel workers must be torn down before it will permit its carpenters, masons, plasterers and bricklayers to complete the structures. According to Robert P. Brindell, President of the council, there are about seventeen skeletons in big buildings in New York which are affected by the order.

"If the owners of these buildings want them completed," said Brindell, "they will have to tear down all the work put up by the non-union iron erectors."

He mentioned several buildings among them the Loft-candy factory at Long Island City, the Metropolitan's new building in Madison Avenue and the Cunard Building in Wall Street, on which work already had ceased.

The Iron League, he said, composed of about twenty-four steel erector firms of this city, employed non-union labor. By virtue of their connection with the United States Corporation those firms had been able to get steel in advance of other contractors.

Members of the Iron League have told owners," he added, "to go ahead with their new buildings and that after the steel framework was up they could easily get masons and carpenters to complete the work. What they have spent is a complete loss to them. Those buildings on which no work is being performed to-day ought to serve as an example to others who are contemplating building and having steel work done by non-union firms."
